Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. When twenty-four year old Holly came to the river, she didn't know what promise the summer would hold. Yet more than a change of seasons would occur over the summer in the small river town of Monte Rio, California. That summer, the remote village, barely touched by time, was sure the devil himself moved in when marijuana grower and broker, Ric Deleone, decided to shake things up, threatening the status quo. Ric's Pot Gardens Cafe was a world of inclusion with no differentiation between the players, the sweet, gentle freaks who ran away from towns all over the country without anyone noticing, people who weren't missed, who came to the world's edge, a place so remote that no one would bother looking for them even if they did miss them. To these fortune seekers, marijuana was emerald-green gold that sparkled with the promise of riches for anyone strong enough to cultivate the rich, red earth. Ramblers with little to leave behind, seduced by media reports of a new gold rush in California, who thought they had found paradise, a veritable Garden of Weeden, traveled far to claim their personal pot of gold buried at the bottom of the rainbow crossing the muddy-green Russian River. The few who found gold would hold it at all cost, leaving the new prospectors to discover a paradise disrupted by change and a deeply divided community conflicted by issues tougher than their power to solve them. Eventually the trees would grow taller, the ivy and the blackberries would choke the forest and the ferns would widen as the novelty of change and the disruption in people's lives became yesterday's news. It...
